Task 1 – Design your own cosy hole. Sketch your cosy hole so if shows your personality and interests. You may want to draw the scene in your favourite season. Colour your picture in thinking about which colours may reflect your personality.

Task 2 – Write a short paragraph in the style of Carol Ann Duffy to accompany your drawing.

This is the original: 'She would sleep quite late the following day. By the time she'd shopped, cooked, laundered, ironed, read a bit of her new book and perhaps visited a neighbour in another hole, the Happy Endings had flown back to the forest like homing pigeons and were hanging from the ancient, silver birch all ready for Jub to collect once again.'

Think about which bits you could change. Here is an example:

'He would wake early the next day. By the time, he'd swam, baked, sewn, read, done a landscape drawing from the top branch of his tree and perhaps built a tower of cards ready to be knocked down by his annoying pet crow, the Happy Endings had glided back to the tree tops like iron filings to magnets and were dangling from the towering, ancient oak trees all ready for Bob to collect once again.

Task 3 – Share your image with someone in your house. Talk about what clues there are in your picture to show your personality. We will be sharing our cosy holes in tomorrow's lessons so have it ready to hold up to your camera.
